A new sofa from Eilersen combining grace and strength

- New product from Eilersen

Session is the latest addition from Eilersen, who has once again created a sofa for the most discerning of audiences. The construction is supported by slim legs made of brushed stainless steel, which achieves the familiar ambition of completing the shape through functionality.

Surprising simplicity

Industry connoisseurs will probably not be surprised by the simplicity that is met by even the most volatile of eyes when they see the Session sofa, which is intended to have a central location in, e.g. the living room, lobby or hall. Its sculptural aesthetics come into full being when standing alone, but make no mistake: Session is a safe haven, not a delicate sculpture. As with all of Eilersen's sofas, it is designed, produced and assembled to withstand the wear that occurs naturally at a popular place for relaxation and rest.

“With Session, we have created a sofa that is as beautiful to look at as it is comfortable to sit in. The consistency of the construction is an achievement from a design point of view, but the most important thing for me is that the seating comfort is optimal, as well as that it continues to be so,” says designer Jens Juul Eilersen.

Just add a personal touch

The sofa has a fixed back, and the two loose back cushions can be moved around at pleasure. The seat is Eilersen's renowned down top, which with its core of foam - and swaddling of down and duck feathers - ensures comfort and lasting resilience over the course of time. The Session is a modular piece of furniture and can be upholstered in textile or leather. Therefore, the possibilities for enjoying a sofa with a personal touch are virtually infinite. This means that Eilersen's customers can choose the colour and structure that precisely matches their own preferences and dreams.
